annexed by a new ordinance. The Education Department had been very much increased and improved. The Secretary's Department had been increased, and thirteen additional universities were reported. The expense of the civil establishments had been increased from £1,187,000 to £2,150,000. The revenue also had not been materially advanced. The only ground of complaint was the military expenditure, which was said to be heavy to pay. As one of this country said almost the whole of its military despatch; but after the report of the Select Committee on the military expenses of India the colonies a very different system was adopted with regard to Ceylon, as well as all other colonies. India paid the whole of her civil and military expenses, and England the different principle be applied to Ceylon? They desired to have the appropriation of the revenues, and that it should not be directed by the simple instructions of the Colonial Secretary at home. That would be a total change in their constitution. They also asked that the inefficient members should be equated with the efficient members. If that proposal was adopted, the Government, on the one hand, would be enabled to reform them, would have to exercise a casting vote, and would thus be placed in a position to reform this Government.

This image is a high-contrast, black and white scan of a vertical strip, likely a page edge or a binding. The strip is predominantly white with some dark, irregular markings and textures, set against a solid black background. The overall appearance is grainy and abstract, with no discernible text or figures.

A high-contrast, black and white photograph of a dark, textured surface, possibly a book cover or a wall. A small, bright, rectangular object is visible near the top center. The image is heavily shadowed, with the bright object providing a focal point. The texture of the surface is grainy and uneven.
